

RAG (Retrieval-Augmented Generation) is an advanced AI technique that combines large language models with external knowledge sources. It retrieves relevant information from documents or databases to generate accurate, context-aware responses, making it highly effective for question answering and enterprise search.